The below statistics are from StatCounter for the first quarter of 2019, for the desktop versions of Photoshop and Photoshop Elements. The userbase of elements is now over 1.5 million. We want to make it as easy as possible to determine which Photoshop apps will work best on your PC. To do that, we've created a new website, Digital Photography Review.com/tools. It contains an extensive list of every version of every product that we've reviewed and rated at the site. Simply enter the product name in the search bar on the left, and you can choose between version numbers and download sizes. If you want to read more about a product on the site, click on the name and you'll get the full story, including screenshots, ratings and some expert opinions. You can also click on the Preview button and get to your download pages for that product. Before downloading, we strongly recommend that you carefully consider the terms of service of the product you are downloading. A few years ago, it would have been appropriate to just click on the link for the license you agreed to accept at the start of the program; but now, we highly recommend that you read the terms carefully. There are many products on the market that claim to be free, and ask for money only later when you are trying to do something the program wasn't designed for. And there are many companies that offer free trials to show you their products, but insist that you pay them when you have finished. We spent a long time testing these products, and only recommend those we found to be useful, legitimate and trustworthy. You'll get a better experience with products that are free to use but that you have to pay for once you're finished with the trial. The below statistics are for all the programs we've reviewed in 2018, including all listed versions of Photoshop, Photoshop Elements, Lightroom, Adobe Camera Raw, Lightroom Classic, Lightroom Lightroom Mobile, Lightroom CC, Sketchbook Pro and Photo Mechanic. The user base of these programs is now over a million. We have used all products that have chosen to allow Reviews.org to host their reviews.

Koch Industries Advances Its Exploration Prospects in the USA Koch Industries Advances Its Exploration Prospects in the USA Since its beginning in 1943, Koch Industries has grown into a multibillion-dollar business. A strategic investor in oil and gas, chemical and petrochemical, agriculture, refining and forestry, Koch Industries is the largest privately owned company in the United States. The company is well known for its business reach and for its clean-air and clean-water pollution prevention efforts. Koch products are sold in all 50 U.S. states and in 100 countries and territories. Koch Industries is proud to join the American Petroleum Institute as an affiliate member. The entire Koch family joins EPA in expressing its disappointment in what has transpired in the U.S. Congress with regard to the reauthorization of the Toxic Substances Control Act (TSCA). We are extremely frustrated and saddened that our government has failed to act to protect and enhance the environment, as it has for many years. Our responsibility to the health, safety and well-being of our stakeholders, including our employees, shareholders and the public is paramount. The Koch family has opposed the passage of TSCA over the past 20 years and continues to work closely with members of Congress to address the need for revisions. We are very proud to have the opportunity to serve our communities and our stakeholders in the private sector through our other energy-focused subsidiaries. Company History The Koch family has a long history with Koch Industries. Charles Koch's father, Fred Koch, started Koch and Company with his brothers in 1940, but Charles never worked in Koch Industries. Charles Koch became a major shareholder, eventually taking over the entire company in 1970. In the process, Charles and his brother David Koch made significant contributions to Koch Industries. For example, in the early 1980s, they acquired interests in the international oil field services and chemicals and manufacturing businesses. As a result, Koch Industries became the world's largest privately owned company by revenues. Most recently, the Koch brothers built Koch Liquified Petroleum GmbH into a leading supplier of oil products to customers around the world, and Koch Midstream Partners LLC became the leading U.S. operator of pipelines. Businesses Koch Industries' businesses are diverse and include oil and gas, petrochemical, agriculture, refining and forestry, chemical, and other industries, as well as the processing and retailing of paper products. What's New in the?

The present invention relates to a stick gum package, and more particularly, to a package that can be opened to expose the stick gum without tearing the opening, and that prevents or reduces the leakage of stick gum components into the package. Stick gum is manufactured by the blending of gum base with chewing gum ingredients, such as sugar, high fructose corn syrup and a water solution of a hydrogenated vegetable fat such as a cocoa butter substitute. Stick gum is often packaged in a sealed container, and is commercially available in packages that are kept closed until the sticks are ready to be pulled out of the package. To enable the user to open the package at the point of purchase without tearing the package, stick gum packages are typically designed to permit at least partial opening of the package when the sticks are removed from the package. While packages can generally be opened without tearing, a significant problem with packages of stick gum is that significant amounts of chewing gum ingredients can leak from the package during the time that the package is open. Once the package is open, it typically cannot be resealed without compromising the integrity of the package. Therefore, the user must contend with the unpleasant issue of chewing gum leaking from the package, and then either having to scrape the chewing gum from the package, or discarding the chewing gum because of possible contamination by milk, sugar or other food items. Furthermore, the leakage of chewing gum ingredients from stick gum packages can cause the stick gum to lose its freshness, and can reduce its shelf-life. Several different methods for preventing or reducing the leakage of chewing gum ingredients from stick gum packages have been used. Some prior attempts to address the leaking problem have included a package having a seal that is designed to rupture under pressure exerted on the package. However, these packages have not been entirely successful, because the seal quickly ruptures after the package is opened. In addition, the ruptured seals can also cause the leakage of chewing gum ingredients from the package, and can create problems related to the strength and integrity of the package. Other prior packages have included a tamper-evident seal that requires the application of a force to break the seal, but that tamper-evident seals are usually not as secure as seal materials that can be used in stick gum packages. Another possible approach to reducing the leakage of chewing gum ingredients from stick gum packages is to form a tamper-evident seal in such a manner that it does not permit chewing gum ingredients to leak from the package until the seal has been removed.
