left. Microalbuminuria predicts new onset of type 2 diabetes mellitus during a two-year follow-up of hypertensive patients without diabetes. The aim of the present study was to evaluate the predictive ability of urinary albumin and lipid excretions for the development of type 2 diabetes mellitus in hypertensive patients without overt diabetes. A total of 232 hypertensive patients without overt diabetes were followed up for 2 years. Out of the 232 patients, 73 (31.5%) were men and 159 (68.5%) were women. During the follow-up period, 26 (11.2%) patients developed new onset of diabetes.

Microalbuminuria was defined as albumin excretion ≥ 20 microg/min. We compared patients who developed diabetes with those who did not develop diabetes. The mean age was 64.5 years and the mean duration of hypertension was 10.8 ± 5.1 years. During the follow-up period, 22 patients (9.4%) developed new onset of diabetes. Microalbuminuria was more frequent in patients who developed diabetes compared to those who did not develop diabetes (52.4% vs. 26.8%, $P = 0.007$). The multivariate logistic regression analysis showed microalbuminuria ($P = 0.016$) and metabolic syndrome ($P = 0.008$) to be independent predictors of the development of diabetes. Microalbuminuria also predicted diabetes development with a sensitivity of 63.6% and a specificity of 66.4%. In conclusion, we demonstrated that microalbuminuria predicted the new onset of type 2 diabetes mellitus in hypertensive patients without overt diabetes.

Partnerships The Way to Reach Out to People How are you addressing your job listing needs? Do you have a good number of candidates responding to your ads, but still don't have a good sense of the quality of candidates you are finding? Maybe you have good numbers of candidates responding but you are frustrated because too many of them are not the right fit for your company? You are not alone with these issues. You are probably already working with a recruitment consultant, but you might not be getting much value from your efforts. Either you are not working well with the consultant, or it is taking
