The Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) president Amit Shah on Thursday used a tweet to pull up cricketer Sachin Tendulkar, 53, posted a video on Twitter of himself talking to a recording device and saying that "in all these years" he had never voted. The Congress member said he had not followed which party he voted for. "I did not vote because I have been silent all these years. I am not a BJP vote. Let them vote, but I have followed my conscience & will not cast my vote in the polls. pic.twitter.com/RF10jYHkHZ — Sachin Tendulkar went on to say that he had never voted for the Congress in the previous elections. The video-taped conversation is from an interview he did in February last year. In May last year, Tendulkar was seen as a poster boy of the Congress with the party fielding him as an MP candidate in the Lok Sabha polls. But he was reported to have voted for the BJP. This is one of the reasons the party targeted him in 2014 Lok Sabha elections, when it fielded him as a Congress candidate in Vadodara. In September 2014, he had told an interviewer that "your interest is to be with the constituency that gave you as much opportunity as much as you gave it to other areas. And if that constituency." The Congress had dropped the anti-corruption campaigner in 2016, saying his style and image were no longer suited to modern campaigning. Shah has recently been in the news for his meetings with several Congress leaders and several points of contention between the two parties. In January last year, he'd accused the Congress of not being a real secular party, saying that the party was a "
