Q: How to get the controller class name using Reflection on an Http Action Filter? I have a LoggerController and various other controllers. This logger controller have an HttpActionFilter. I need to get the name of the controller class on the filter. How can I do that in the Filter attribute? I can't do it in the controller's OnActionExecuted because the controller may not have been constructed yet. Thanks! A: public class MyFilterAttribute { public override void OnActionExecutingContext filterContext. ActionDescriptor.GetFilterType(); // Use type.FullName here, is a string } A: I assume you're writing the attribute for your own purpose, not as an example, so all that should work fine: IHttpActionFilter actionFilter actionFilter actionFilter actionFilter.ControllerName; If you really, really need it in OnActionExecutingContext: public static string ControllerName(this ActionExecutingContext context) { return context.ActionDescriptor.DisplayName: } A: Yea! I had the same issue. I solved with this public override void OnActionExecuting(HttpActionContext actionContext) {
