While Photoshop CS4 may be a bit confusing to use initially, learning to use it is worth it when you realize how easy it is to achieve results that are not possible with other products. # Mac or PC:

Which Is Better? The answer is that both Mac and PC users should consider themselves blessed with the talents of a professional artist. The fact is that they work on either platform. Because the two platforms are so similar, users are no longer required to use one platform for their designs and the other for their output. With the program's release of Photoshop CS5, the answer for most users is to use Photoshop CS5 on the Mac. In truth, Photoshop has a greater level of functionality on Mac because it is Apple-led. Even though other software vendors have taken advantage of Mac OS X, Adobe has been giving Mac users the edge in the form of added features and enhancements. ## The Components of

"I am doing nothing wrong. Why should I be afraid? My old job is in end. I was not a black-hat hacker, but after the failed interview, the real recruiters told me that they are increasing the payment to a better position. I just want to get a better job." An anonymous e-mail hacker from China hacked into the personal email account of a woman named Grace Huang, a senior consultant at Fortune 500 company, and put her into panic. She had not disclosed her real identity in the LinkedIn account. And the hacker also found her personal phone number and sent it to her friend. Two weeks ago, Ms. Huang's friend received a phone call from a man asking about her business trip last October. When she couldn't answer, the man kept calling her. One of her friend said the man sounded nervous and talked in a bit too fast English. In a message with the link, the woman told the hacker to stop bothering her. The hacker replied: "I will not stop unless you give me a job." The mystery lady went into great anxiety, but for most people, like this woman, the job-seeker is more likely to choose "get-out-of-here" in the end. Why Chinese hackers are more crazy than their

English counterparts? "Every year, some white-hat hackers send fake job messages to employees of other companies who have some spare time. They use their social media account to do so. "But in China, the total number of real job inquiries is about 10 percent. Most of the rest are fake job inquiries. This year is no exception. At least half of the messages are fake job inquiries. To my knowledge, the hacker in this case is the first real one to have hacked into her private account." In fact, the e-mail hacker didn't even bother to hack into the woman's LinkedIn account. The hacker just used her phone number. Guess who was likely to get the job? Miss Huang told her LinkedIn friends. Her friends flooded the woman with messages: "Oh my god, where was this? Who is this? Are you at the same company as us? Please help us! Thank you for helping us!" And one of her friends eventually brought her to the police. "The police found that the hacker used her cell phone number, not her personal one. It is easy to trace the

and putting it towards cheaper alternatives, and that includes a trip to the clinic. With an annual family of four having a combined medical savings of $25,000, visits to the doctor often don't make the cut. That's why full-time day-to-day sex workers in Minneapolis, Minnesota are slowly turning to an alternative. Health care for these workers, mostly dependent on a salaried position, is an issue on their minds. "It's a new field for us," said Sabirah, a sex worker who worked for six years until recently and only works through a network of paid providers. "I have heard that the prices are around $300 a month, and the prices are lower. But they vary on every person." As the population ages and health care expenses rise, people are turning to less expensive and more readily available options, such as day-to-day sex work. This is more common in the US than in other countries, as well as in the UK, where a law has allowed sex workers to set their own hours. Last year, A Growing Number of British Sex Workers Have Changed to Daytime Work – LESS Work, MORE Money – BBC News. The difference between a regular job and sex work is that sex workers choose their clients. Municipal ordinances where it's illegal to offer sexual services are rarely enforced and sex workers often "moonlight" for the side business. “The difference between a regular job and sex work is that sex workers choose their clients. We have to change our sex work hours to suit our clients’ schedules, so we can’t be working when people don’t need it,” Sabirah said. While sex work is a vulnerable field, it is also a lucrative one for the operators, who feel like it’s a normal choice in their lives. “It’s important to add new skills to your repertoire. You can’t just rely on your husband as a potential provider,” she said. From 2012-13, about eight women took on this career path, according to the National Coalition of Anti-Violence Programs (NCAVP). Of the estimated 3,988 total day-to-day sex workers in
