In the 1960s, John F. Kennedy was given "Operation Mongoose," a secret plan to start a war in Cuba and remove the Fidel Castro regime. Almost 50 years later, we're starting to see a re-up of this plan, in the form of a grassroots "Cuban Twitter Revolution." Cuban Twitter is a social platform designed to bring Cubans, many of whom spend most of their time in the age-old internet shadows of their neighbors, a direct connection to the rest of the world. Here is an interview with WUSA.com about the importance of this initiative: - 1. Can you explain in plain English the concept of Cuban Twitter? - Yes. Cuban Twitter is a social platform designed to bring Cubans, many of whom spend most of their time in the age-old internet shadows of their neighbors, a direct connection to the rest of the world. 2. How has the Cuban Twitter project been received in the U.S.? - We have been lucky with the reception. In a lot of ways, U.S. firms have helped us promote Cuba itself. Over the last few years, we have received tweets from chefs, music promoters, fashion designers, foreign tourists, celebrities, real estate agents and fashion designers have all promoted us on Twitter. 3. How does Cuban Twitter function? Is it an umbrella Facebook-like application, or is it a spinoff? - Yes, it is an app and we are releasing it in 7 platforms right now, like iOS, Android, Windows Phone, Blackberry, and others. Our intention is that our users are able to share videos, photos and links easily using just their smart phone and Twitter. 4. Have any third-party applications been integrated into Cuban Twitter? - Yes. Over the last few months we have been working with some great developers, like those from the Mobile App Store and the Android Market. 5. Who has been leading the Cuban Twitter project in Cuba, and who is leading it in the U.S.? - Cuba Twitter is a project of the Cuban Institute of Cinematographic Art and Technique (ICIC), which is a government-run entity, and we have a Cuban developer, Ana Paula Madrid Ruiz, based in New Jersey who is leading the project in the U.S. 6.
