Printouts.[Is there still any atrial natriuretic factor as in the 70s?]. As from now on many data regarding endocrine (ADH, ANF) and paracrine (atrial natriuretic peptide) factors are in the focus of attention. Atrial natriuretic peptide (ANP) is synthesized by cardiocytes, secreted in arterial blood and it is then filtered by the glomeruli. The half-life of circulating ANP is of about 10-20 minutes, and it exerts a potent natriuretic and diuretic effect. Data supporting the endocrine and paracrine action of ANP are not convincing, and the natriuretic effect after pharmacological and surgical manipulations of endogenous ANF, are controversial. Cardiocyte hypertrophy and hyperplasia due to overshooting hormones production is expected to be the major hormonal mechanism. Data supporting this hypothesis are scarce, and main emphasis is on the role of a hormonal overshooting mechanism. No data are available on a role of impaired endothelial function and an impaired receptor function of ANF as a main pathogenetic factor in the pathogenesis of edema of heart failure.EL PASO, Texas — An El Paso Border Patrol agent saved a baby from drowning before the little boy's desperate father tried to grab him, authorities said. The agent, whose name has not been released, witnessed the drowning of a woman and child in the Rio Grande River on Sunday in South El Paso, according to U.S. Customs and Border Patrol officials. The agent grabbed the child and tried to pull him from the water. The child's father jumped into the river to try to save him, officials said. When they began to struggle over the boy, the father climbed over the agent and threw him into the river, according to the
